2008-2009 year.
The emphasis is to make dreams real for the world's children.*

CLUB NOTES 10/17/08

The Two Musketeers ! We forgot to give John and Dale the privilege of wearing the hat, so we got John this week as well as Larry. Larry paid $100 for the honor!

Paul apologized for "flaking" last week and paid $10.

Our youngest guest, Maya Silvestre.

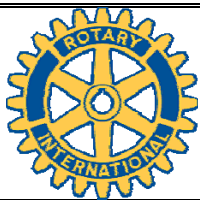

Janice talks about Harvest Moon. Joe paid $10 for sleeping in last week! Mike asked for a new pin and paid $10 for losing his.

If children are our future, then parents are the foundation for that future. Parenting skills may come only by osmosis: what we saw is what we emulate. Unfortunately for many, what they observed will not serve them well. Locally, the Parent Resource Center (PRC) is available to help. Its mission is "to build stronger, healthier families by offering volunteer in-home mentoring, support services and parenting education to parents who are at risk for child abuse and neglect." The center's "goal is to provide emotional and educational support for parents in nurturing and guiding their children through the critical first 5 years of a child's life."

PRC clients include pregnant teens, and referrals of parents from family court mediation services and Child Protective Services. Programs available to PRC clients include parenting classes, labor and delivery support, and child abuse prevention training. PRC partners with the Stanislaus Literacy Center to offer family literacy and GED preparation classes. As Leah Silvestre, director of the center points out, by serving these families, PRC also serves our community. Like most non-profits, PRC depends on fund raising and donations to finance its operations. It employs a small staff, and relies on volunteers. To learn more about PRC, visit its website at www.prcfamilies.org or call PRC at 549-8193.

The 4-Way Test of the things we think, say or do:

1. Is it the truth?
2. Is it fair to all concerned?
3. Will it build goodwill and better friendships?
4. Will it be beneficial to all concerned?

The Classification Principle

Virtually all membership in Rotary is based upon a “classification:” basically, a classification describes the distinct and recognized business or professional service that the Rotarian renders to society.

The principle of Rotary classification is somewhat more specific and precise. In determining the classification of a Rotarian, it is necessary to look at the “principal or recognized business or professional activity of the firm, company, or institution” with which an active member is connected or “that which covers the active member’s principal and recognized business or professional activity.”

It should be clearly understood that classifications are determined by activities or services to society rather than by the position held by a particular individual. In other words, if a person is the president of a bank, he or she is not classified as “bank president” but under the classification “banking.”

The classification principle also permits businesses and industries to be separated into distinct functions such as manufacturing, distributing, retailing, and servicing. Classifications may also be specified as distinct and independent divisions of a large corporation or university within the club’s territory, such as a school of business or a school of engineering.

The classification principle is a necessary concept in assuring that each Rotary club represents a cross section of the business and professional service of the community.
